

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Upon a search request including a document logical structure, a search graph including the document structure information is generated. A most appropriate search plan is generated by the computation cost simulation, by using index file composed of data creation index and element name occurrence index, and previously prepared plan generation rule, for the generated search graph. Search results satisfying the search request is obtained by executing the search plan generated for the structured document database.